BOTTOM LINE UP FRONT

Marketing is outbound-and-credibility-led, not brand-spend-led. The budget goes to the two things that move a niche B2B market: showing up where installers gather (trade shows, trade bodies) and building undeniable proof (UK case studies). Broad paid brand advertising is the wrong tool for a 5,250-firm market.

1. Priorities (in order)

Priority	Activity	Why
1	Direct outbound (Pack 08)	Cheapest, most-qualified demand in a small named market
2	Trade-show presence	Where the entire ICP physically gathers
3	Reference/case-study engine	Proof is the currency in a trust-driven trade
4	Content/SEO for intent terms	Capture the installers actively searching
5	Trade-body co-marketing (RECC/HIES)	Borrowed credibility at scale
6	Targeted paid (validate CAC)	Only once message + funnel are proven

2. Why not big brand spend

RIGHT TOOL, RIGHT MARKET

With ~5,250 target firms, you can practically name every prospect (Pack 06). In that world, a £-for-£ pound spent on precise outbound and trade-show presence beats broad advertising many times over. Marketing's job here is to make the named list warm and to manufacture proof — not to build mass awareness.

3. Budget logic

Marketing spend should be modest and traction-gated (Pack 05 growth phases): a trade-show stand or two, basic web/content, minimal paid until CAC is proven. Exact figures sit in the financial model's Assumptions Register (Pack 16) as validated inputs, not guesses.

Implication

The marketing plan is deliberately lean and precise — a fit for both the small market and the loan-funded budget. It hands most of the demand-generation load to outbound (Pack 08) and proof (case studies), which is where a focused newcomer wins.
