BOTTOM LINE UP FRONT

In a 10–50-person installer, two people decide: the owner/MD (buys growth, control and margin) and the operations lead (buys relief from admin chaos). Speak to both — the MD signs, but the ops lead's daily pain is what makes the case urgent.

Persona 1 — The Owner / Managing Director

Wants	Growth without losing control; visible pipeline; protected margin; less chaos as they scale
Fears	Paying £1,000+/mo for shelfware; a painful switch that disrupts a busy install schedule; being locked in
Responds to	"Proven — 600+ deployments"; "priced to start small and grow"; the cost of the status quo in £
Decides on	Commercial case + confidence it will actually get adopted

Persona 2 — The Operations Lead

Wants	Fewer dropped jobs; faster quotes; no more chasing crews on WhatsApp; automatic commission maths
Fears	Another system nobody uses; messy data migration; more admin, not less
Responds to	The Work-Flow engine demo; the 30-day onboarding with a dedicated "personal tutor" (Pack 12)
Decides on	Will this actually make my week easier by day 30?

The combined play

SELL THE PAIN TO OPS, THE CASE TO THE MD

Discovery (Pack 09) should surface the ops lead's daily pain quantitatively (hours lost, deals slipped), then present the MD with that pain costed in pounds and the per-seat, proven, low-risk answer. The free 30-day trial with hands-on onboarding is what closes the ops lead's adoption fear — the single biggest silent deal-killer.

Implication

Outreach (Pack 08) targets both titles; the demo (Pack 09) is structured to give each persona their moment. These personas are hypotheses to sharpen with real discovery calls — update them as pilot data arrives.
