BOTTOM LINE UP FRONT

Two compounding, low-cost engines: customer referrals (a happy installer's word carries enormous weight in a tight-knit trade) and trade-body partnerships (RECC/HIES reach the entire ICP with borrowed credibility). Both get more powerful as UK references accumulate.

1. Referral engine

WORD-OF-MOUTH IS THE TRADE'S REAL MARKETING

Installers talk — at merchants, at trade shows, in WhatsApp groups. A structured referral incentive (e.g. account credit for a successful referral) turns satisfied early customers into a low-CAC acquisition channel. This is the highest-trust, lowest-cost channel available and it compounds with the reference flywheel (Pack 05).

2. Trade-body partnerships

| Body                                  | Opportunity                                                                   |
|---------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| RECC (Renewable Energy Consumer Code) | Partner directory listing, newsletter, joint webinar — reaches MCS installers |
| HIES                                  | Similar reach across a broader home-energy remit                              |

Every MCS installer must join an approved consumer code, so RECC/HIES are a direct line to the whole ICP. Partnership terms are to be agreed (⚠), and become far more attractive once you have UK references to point to.

3. RRUP referrals

RRUP's existing EU customers with UK operations, or EU installers themselves expanding to the UK, are a warm channel RRUP can open — worth asking directly (Pack 22).

Implication

Referral and channel partnerships are the mature-phase CAC reducers. They can't carry the launch (no references yet), but building the referral mechanics early and opening RECC/HIES conversations after the first wins sets up a durable, low-cost growth engine.
